

Research Logix

Research Logix is a Software as a Service that centralizes and simplifies the collection of investigator related data. We have built the tools necessary to ease the burden of data collection, and created a platform that sets a new standard for research administration technology solutions.

Complex Data Collection Simplified

Management of investigators – and their research information – is a daunting task for administrators. Publications, funding, and biosketches all need to be tracked for various reporting and administrative purposes. Typically, these jobs are all handled by different people and groups around institutions. Individually managed data from various sources can cause major issues when the need arises to collect and analyze data. Enter Research Logix.
